As one of the tools to enhance communication with a diverse range of its stakeholders, Honda has been issuing an annual report that comprehensively summarizes the company’s approach and initiatives to enhance its sustainability from the perspectives of ESG (Environment, Social, and Governance), with a primary focus on reporting its track record of achievements.

Honda had been issuing an annual summary of its ESG initiatives and related data as the “Honda ESG Data Book.” Now under a new name – Honda ESG Report – the summary includes additional information such as targets and direction in each ESG area, as well as initiatives Honda has taken to achieve the targets, a tracked record of achievements, and related data itemized for each target. These changes were made to further clarify the distinction between the Honda ESG Report and the Honda Report, which focuses on sharing stories about how Honda will enhance its corporate value into the future. Honda is committed to making efforts to disclose information in a way that is clear and tailored to meet the needs of its stakeholders.
